Alex & Sarah

About Us

We have been together for ten years and what an exciting ten years it has been. We have got to share many life experiences with each other and we are so excited to be able to bring a child into our home to share in these experiences with us. We both have a love for sports, whether it is professional, college or just cheering on our nieces and nephews in their sporting events. We also love to travel and have been blessed to be able to travel through Alex's work. In our spare time Alex enjoys golf in the warmer months, cards in the cold months and Sarah enjoys home decorating, gardening and watching movies.

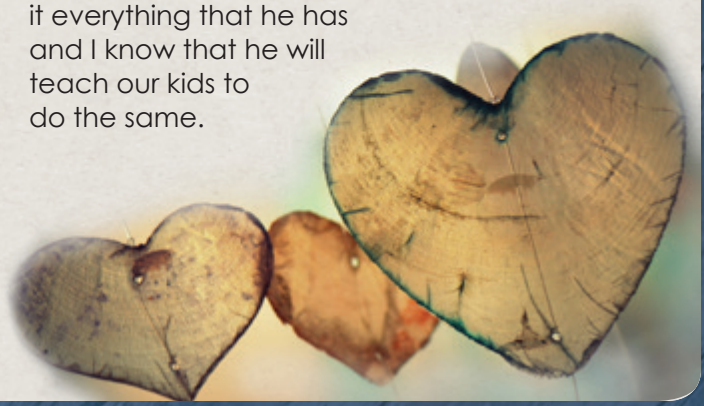
We both work full time but really enjoy coming home after a long day and eating supper together and talking about our days. Alex works at the family camper sales business and Sarah works in logistics as a transportation coordinator. Although we both love our jobs we cannot think of anything we would love more than to be parents.

ABOUT Sarah (written by Alex)

When I first met Sarah I was instantly attracted to the quiet comfort that she exudes. Her character and personality is often mistaken for shy or timid, but she is far from either. Instead, Sarah is one of the most loyal and dependable cheerleaders you can have in life (coincidentally, she was a cheerleader in high school). Sarah has an amazing ability to adapt to every circumstance and overcome adversity. Sarah is as sweet as can be, but she throws a mean game of cornhole and can definitely hang with the competition. I have been blessed to be married to this beautiful woman for four years– she is an amazing cook, loves to decorate and has a compassion that doesn't end. I couldn't ask for a more wonderful, loving, Christian woman to be my wife and I know she will be an equally amazing mother.

ABOUT Alex (written by Sarah)

One of the things that I love most about Alex is that he has such a big heart and will do anything for anyone. He is a man of great faith and puts God first in everything that he does. I often say that Alex is still a kid at heart and at family get-togethers he is always the one playing games with our nieces and nephews in the basement while all of the adults are upstairs. He has such a love for kids and I know that he will be an amazing father. One of the things that attracted me most to Alex is his determination and drive to never give up. When Alex does something, he gives it everything that he has and I know that he will teach our kids to do the same.



Our Story

We both graduated from the same high school and although it was a small school and we both knew who each other was, neither of us can remember talking to each other. Alex graduated in 2006 and Sarah in 2007 and it wasn't until Alex was home for the summer, after his freshman year of college that we started hanging out. After dating for five years we got engaged and were married the following year. We wanted to start a family right away and after many struggles we both decided that we wanted to look in to adoption and we are so excited about our decision.

Our Home

Alex has lived in our home his whole life. We bought our house from Alex's parents after we got married four years ago and that was when Sarah moved in. Our house is a ranch style home with four bedrooms, one of them being ours, and the other three just waiting to be filled with children. We also have a fixed up basement and two full bathrooms. We are on a one acre lot in town with plenty of room to run. Just down the street from us is the local park with a playground, tennis court, basketball court and baseball field. We live in a very safe and friendly town with many young families. Although our town is on the small side, there are a lot of fun things that go on. From the community picnic in July, parish bingo, baseball tournaments and outside movie night every Friday in the summer at the community center, there are many fun, family oriented things to do.

Our family and friends have been our biggest support system throughout our adoption journey. We both have very close relationships with our families and they are always there for us when we need advice. Alex's parents and one of his sister's and her family live just across the street from us. His other three siblings and their families also live nearby, with the furthest one being just 30 minutes away, so we see them often. Sarah's parents live just 15 minutes away with her youngest sister still at home and other sister about two hours away. We love spending time with both of our families and there is never a dull moment when everyone is together. On Alex's side of the family we have fourteen nieces and nephews and all of them are so excited to be getting a new cousin in the family. This will be the first grandchild on Sarah's side of the family and the excitement level is through the roof.

Many of our friends live in the town that we grew up in and so we have a great support system through them as well. We are constantly getting together for cookouts, campfires or just hanging out and playing board games or cards. Most of them already have kids and so we cannot wait to be able to bring our own kids into our group of friends. Our friends know that a child is something that we have wanted for a long time so they are all very excited for us to become parents.

Our Dog

We guess you could say that we have adopted once already with our dog, Carl. He is a six year old terrier mix and weighs about 35lbs. We got him from a rescue almost four years ago now and we are so glad that we did. Alex never had a dog growing up but Sarah always did and so for Alex the idea of getting a dog was not on his agenda. After many discussions we came to the agreement that if we were going to get a dog, Alex got to choose the name. A couple weeks later we brought Carl home. He has such a fun personality and has been such a great addition to our family.

Dear Birthparent(s),

Thank you for taking the time to look through our profile. We hope you were able to get a bit of insight into what our lives are like. Adoption is such a wonderful blessing and gift and we hope that we can share in this experience with you. We admire your strength to pursue this journey of adoption and we promise to raise your child up in a faith filled, steady and caring home with all of the love that we can give.

Love

Why Adoption?

We both have always wanted a big family and when we got married we were both in agreement that we wanted to start a family right away. After many struggles we knew that God had big plans for us when we decided to adopt. We were both raised in close knit, Christian families and we are so excited to be able to share our traditions and values with our own children. We both have so much love to give to a child and cannot wait to give them guidance and support throughout their lives. We are looking forward to beginning this journey together and taking in all of the joy that a child will bring.
